COMMENT OF THE DAY

Eisenhower's Victory

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's re-election will be widely welcomed, though it is a pity that outside America, most are more relieved than particularly pleased at the outcome. This does not detract from his success and his world-wide popularity, however. The ease with which Mr Eisenhower won obviously suggests that the electorate was more than satisfied with the choice they made in 1952 and therefore felt no need to tempt fate by substituting even one so renowned and popular as Mr Adlai Stevenson.

Neither the President's heart condition nor his controversial running mate, Mr Nixon, were big enough handicaps to persuade them to the contrary. Perhaps the President's heart was not a handicap after all; that pregnant philosophy of hope common to all cardinals may well have dictated that they illustrate faith in their own future by a vote for one similarly afflicted. On the other hand, Mr Stevenson's well directed attacks on American foreign policy apparently made little or no difference to his chances.

RESULTS for the House of Representatives and Senate give a better indication of political thinking in America. These—which give the verdict to the Democrats in both houses of Congress—correct the lopsidedness of the Presidential vote to some extent and, of course, they also suggest that this contest was fought on personalities to a very much greater extent than politics. If this view is accepted, Mr Adlai Stevenson may have made his last appearance on the Presidential hustings, but his defeat should not be regarded as a reflection on his ability or high standing—it is just that Mr Eisenhower stands even higher in the public esteem.

Now that the election is over and his re-investiture as President is only a formality—since, in fact, he has never stopped being President—the West will welcome America's return to a realistic and practical diplomacy. Enough damage has been done to the Anglo-American alliance during the campaign—if hasty action by one country is blamed for present tension, equally must be dithering inaction by the other—and it is high time that Western solidarity was restored. The truth is that Europe's and Britain's survival depend upon the United States and it is the sheerest folly to encourage any woolly-headed notion to the contrary.

ONE of the first things needed is a declaration of American policy on the Middle East and a clear statement that any Soviet intervention will automatically bring United States forces to the area. It is unthinkable that two allies should quibble over a danger which involves combatting not only hardstrung Arab nationalism but also the threat of militant communism taking over its leadership from the dictatorial Colonel Nasser.

Another equally urgent need is for a strong American statement and concerted United Nations action on Hungary; the time to send observers into the country is long past. Finally, it is to be hoped that it is not long before a meeting is held between Sir Anthony Eden, M. Mollet and Mr. Eisenhower. If for no other reason than to demonstrate that temporary friction does not mean permanent separation.

ANTI-SOVIET RIOTS IN PARIS

Mobs Fire Communist HQ And Newspaper Office

ANGRY OVER HUNGARY

Paris, Nov. 7.
Angry French youths armed with Molotov cocktails and flaming editions of the Communist newspaper L'Humanité tonight stormed and fired the headquarters of the French Communist Party and the Red daily itself.

It was the most violent outburst in a day of protest demonstrations, work stoppages and parades all over France, registering the nation's anger at Russia's crushing of the Hungarian revolt.

At the offices of the two most important Communist institutions in France were being attacked, the Russian Ambassador, Mr. Svetozar Vagradov, was giving a reception at his Embassy in honour of the Red Army and the 30th anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

65 Injured

At least 65 youths, both Communists and anti-Communists, were injured in wild exchanges with flats, fence stakes and paving stones in the city's streets for hours tonight.

The crowd launched its attack on the massive Party headquarters, a seven-story fortress with barred windows, a separate electric system for each floor and steel-reinforced doors at each stair landing.

They shouted "The Soviets are assassins" and "to hell with Thorz".

Maurice Thorez is leader of the French Communist Party.

Some of the Communists escaped the besieged Party headquarters by scrabbling over rooftops. Others stood their ground and fought the crowd.

The demonstrators battered through the Red defenders, smashed down the building's massive iron and oak door and swarmed into the main floor.

Others pushed their way upstairs, ripped up rugs, curtains, portraits and documents and fired the pile of rubble with gasoline which they carried in wine bottles.

Firemen and policemen fought through the crowd to bring fire-fighting equipment into the building.

As smoke poured from the windows the crowd began chanting "On to Humanité" and surged through the boulevards to the newspaper plant.

Sing Red Song

Pressmen, reporters and office workers stood behind a barricade of desks and office furnishings, singing the "Internationale", as the mob closed in. The anti-Communists smashed their way past the defenders and managed to start a small blaze in the entrance hall of the building. From the upstairs windows defenders dropped flaming wads of paper and turned tyre hoses on the crowd below. Then came a barrage of ink-bottles, paperweights and chair arms.

The anti-Communists retreated across the square in front of the newspaper building, tore up billboards for weapons and ripped up paving stones, which they sent sailing through Humanité's windows.

Hit & Run Sorties

Communist flying squads, armed with bricks and fence stakes, made occasional hit and run sorties on the crowd.

Riot police armed with carbines pushed back the anti-Communists but the two factions clashed again three blocks west of the building a half-hour later. The Communists—this time only a couple of dozen against hundreds—threw bricks and bottles and then disappeared into side streets.

The riot was an off-shoot of an orderly demonstration which took place earlier at the Arc de Triomphe.

Headed by 300 members of the French National Assembly (over 20,000 persons, waving French and Hungarian flags) marched up the Champs Elysées to the Arc de Triomphe.

UN Speeds Action To Get Its Forces Into Egypt

United Nations, Nov. 7. The United Nations moved fast tonight to get British, French and Israeli troops out of Egypt and replace them with an international police force.

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold told the General Assembly Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns of Canada had begun talks with authorities of the four countries concerned and planned to fly to Cairo to work out arrangements.

In Cairo, a UN official said he expected the first units of the international police force to arrive within a week.

Assembly Again Insists On The Withdrawal Of Troops From Egypt

United Nations, Nov. 7. The United Nations General Assembly called again tonight for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli, British and French troops from Egypt and approved plans for an international force to police the battle area from the Suez Canal to Israel's frontier.

The Secretary-General, Mr Dag Hammarskjold, warned Israel that it would face UN action if it failed to withdraw its forces from the Sinai Peninsula and accept the stationing there of the international force.

The United States announced that it was ready "wherever possible to transport the first contingents from their bases to Egypt immediately".

The US representative, Mr Henry Cabot Lodge, said he understood the withdrawal of troops from Egypt would be "phased with the speedy arrival of the UN force".

A CONTRADICTION

The Soviet deputy Foreign Minister, Mr Vasily Kuznetsov, although not voting against the resolution setting up the police force—he abstained—said it was "clear that occupation by international forces means the withdrawal from control of the Egyptian government".

The Soviet delegation considers as in contradiction to the UN Charter the plan for international armed forces on Egyptian territory.

"However, considering that the victim of aggression would have to give its consent to the introduction of these international armed forces, the Soviet delegation abstained during the vote," he said.

Britain told the United Nations Assembly that she was prepared to negotiate the transfer of her responsibility in Egypt to the proposed international police force.

Sir Pierson Dixon, British permanent delegate, said that forthwith Britain and France were prepared to put their technicians under United Nations command to clear the Suez Canal.

NOT A CONDITION

At the same time, he said: "We in no sense make this a condition of our acceptance of the plan for an international force, but it seems to us only reasonable that we should undertake this task and no one else at present is in a position to do so."

Sir Pierson said Britain could not accept that part of a 19-nation resolution before the Assembly which called for immediate withdrawal of Anglo-French troops, which, he declared, must stay in the region until the international force took over.

He said it was, however, Britain's policy to ensure that Israeli forces withdrew from Egyptian territory.—Reuter.

GIRL PARACHUTISTS IN FIGHTING

Tel-Aviv, Nov. 7. Parachute girls were dropped with the Israeli army during the lightning war with Egypt. It was revealed today.

At 6 p.m. last Monday a parachute unit was dropped five miles from the Suez Canal. Girls manned the unit's radio. The unit's job was to cut a road to stop reinforcements from Egypt while armoured columns came from Israel. The parachutists girls had to drop from 10,000 feet.

Next day Egyptian Vampires and MGs attacked. The girls called up fighter cover and then for a supply drop.

There was heavy fighting with 40 Egyptians killed around the roadblock on Wednesday. It wasn't until the next day that the unit was relieved by advance patrols.

Last night some of the girls were back in Tel-Aviv, preparing for another drop.

CABINET SPLIT REPORTED

London, Nov. 7. Reports of a split in Sir Anthony Eden's Cabinet over the Egyptian ceasefire decision received fresh currency tonight when the London Liberal evening newspaper, The Star, in a banner-headed front-page story claimed the Prime Minister yesterday received "what amounts to an ultimatum" from senior colleagues.

Yesterday's meeting of the Cabinet, before the Prime Minister made the ceasefire announcement to the House of Commons, lasted for nearly four hours. Some Conservative MPs said last night it had been stormy, and shown deep divisions of opinion.

The Star's political correspondent, Mr Robert Carvel, declared tonight that a powerful group of ministers, headed by Mr R. A. Butler, Lord Privy Seal and leader of the House of Commons, had demanded an immediate end to the fighting in Egypt, and told the Prime Minister that the assumptions on which the campaign began had proved incorrect.

Plans were being considered for a night session on the Hungarian issue.—United Press.

Only public evidence of disagreement in the government so far was the resignation last week of Mr Anthony Nutting, Minister of State at the Foreign Office, who was opposed to the Middle East policy. Mr Nutting was not, however, a member of the Cabinet.

Now Fears Of Starvation
FOOD STOCKS
IN BUDAPEST
RUNNING LOW

Vienna, Nov. 7. Refugees arriving here from Hungary today said the fear of wholesale starvation now looms over Budapest where rebel pockets were reported to be carrying on their struggle against overwhelming Soviet forces.

Refugees reaching Austria said food had been scarce before the uprising, since when there had been little chance for larders to be restocked.

A total curfew was clamped down by the Russians when they launched their all-out attack four days ago to overthrow the new government of Mr Imre Nagy, now thought to be in Russian hands. Since then the shops have been closed.

Russian troops are looting and plundering Budapest. One refugee said he saw a squad of Russian soldiers break into the Egyptian Legation in broad daylight on Monday afternoon. Their loot included the spare clothes of the Minister himself.

Radios Quiet

No one dare venture out to tend the wounded lying with the dead in the streets, he added.

Rebel radios, for the past four days practically the only source of insurgent news, were today strangely quiet. Not one rebel broadcast was monitored here.

But Russian broadcasts from Hungary urged rebels to lay down their arms and provide an indirect admission that Soviet troops and armour were still meeting opposition.

Observers here said the Russian broadcasts showed that the claim that Russians and Hungarians were fighting together against the common "reactionary" enemy was being dropped.

The name of János Kádár, head of the Soviet-backed Communist Government set up on Sunday as the Russians attacked Budapest, was rarely used. There have been no reliable reports of the whereabouts of this government.

A small group of Hungarian rebels are holding out against the Russians at a frontier post near Nickelsdorf, Austria.

Surrounded

"We shall perish here," the commander of this group said. His 20 or so fighters—soldiers, customs police and passport inspectors—are surrounded on three sides by Soviet tanks and infantry.

At their backs, on the fourth side, is the Austrian frontier.

Monitors of anti-Communist Radio Free Europe said in Munich tonight that the Communist-controlled station Miszkolc reported today that "fascist bandits" had continued to ravage the countries of Dorsod, Abauj, Zemplen, destroying railroad equipment and railway stations. They had also entered the areas of the city of Miskolc.

The monitors said the insurgent Radio Róka this morning broadcast "We are holding our men in the 8th district of Budapest. Soviet losses are serious."

Another insurgent station, Radio Hakozy, addressed urgent appeals for help to President Eisenhower and to members of the United Nations.

Protest To UN

Meanwhile the Communist puppet government of Hungary told UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld tonight that the United Nations has no business discussing the Hungarian situation.

A cable to Hammarskjöld was signed jointly by János Kádár, Soviet-installed Premier of the "Revolutionary Workers

Asian-African Bloc See Victory

CEASEFIRE BEFORE ANGLO-FRENCH GOALS REACHED

United Nations, Nov. 7.

The Asian-African bloc in the United Nations saw a diplomatic victory at hand today in the Middle East ceasefire before attainment of the avowed Anglo-French goals.

But their own stand in refusing to support a condemnation of Soviet intervention in Hungary and manoeuvring today to exploit to the fullest Soviet hints about sending Russian volunteers into the Middle East exposed the group to deep-rooted resentment from the nations on whom they count most heavily for support—the Latin Americans.

Incessus

The Asian and African group insisted that they twice scheduled and twice postponed General Assembly debates on the Middle East yesterday because of the complications of the imminent ceasefire. But Latin American diplomats told United Press bluntly: "They could not get the support they needed for their resolution."

The Cuban representative, Stor Emilio Nuñez-Puerto, who for five years has waged a one-man UN battle against what he calls Soviet "hypocrisy" in East Europe, was particularly incensed when the majority of the Asians and Africans abstained from voting on a resolution denouncing Soviet intervention in Hungary. After the Latin-Americans gave solid support to condemnation of Britain and France over Egypt.

One Latin American source said: "This is something that will not be forgotten easily. The repercussions will be far for a long time." Prime Minister Nehru's statement on Hungary yesterday made things look better, but it was too late to correct what happened in the General Assembly on Hungary."

Same Of Cyprus

An immediate assumption was that the pending Asian-African fight to make the Algerian case another cause celebre in the Assembly's regular session opening next Tuesday would fail to get the strong Latin American backing it had last year.

The same held true for the Cyprus question. On both questions the Latin Americans support the moral argument of the Asians and Africans, but their enthusiasm is certainly diluted now.

The Asian-African strategy on the Middle East was now to seek the immediate withdrawal of Anglo-French and Israeli forces from Egypt. They showed restrained jubilation over the fact that the ceasefire cut short the Anglo-French attempt to gain full control of the Suez Canal Zone and also thwarted the obvious intention to depose President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

There was concern at the UN about Israel's stand on holding the Sinai peninsula and the Island of Tiran in the Gulf of Aqaba and some apprehension about the complications this may force in the Assembly's debates. Britain's insistence that Israeli troops must leave the Sinai was seized upon by Arab diplomats as favouring their own case and further weakening the Anglo-French position.

Add Fuel

The Arabs were making the most out of the latest Soviet talk about sending volunteers to Egypt and counted on the Soviet Union to add fuel to this particular fire during today's debate. Soviet diplomats were in a steady round of consultations with Arabs and Africans, and it seemed obvious that they were working unceasingly to undermine any goodwill which accrued to the US through its stand against the Anglo-French attack.

What was in the making here was remarkably reminiscent of the pre-Czechoslovakian coup when the Soviet convinced Czech leaders, particularly Edward Benes, as he later wrote in his memoirs, that they alone had wanted to send military aid to the Czechs to prevent the Nazi occupation but that Britain and France had backed down. For Dr Benes this became an enormous debt of honour which pulled the Czechs away from the West and paved the way for Communist control.

Arab diplomats reject any suggestion that there is such a parallel today. But they express the general belief that Colonel Nasser will emerge stronger than ever from this crisis and that the Soviet aid offers will be long remembered with gratitude.

Saved Egypt

What the West does about Israel's retention of the Sinai peninsula will perhaps be the key to Egypt's future orientation, these Arabs insist.—United Press.

Ike Asked To Take Concrete Stand For World Peace

Djakarta, Nov. 7.

The Indonesian Foreign Minister, Mr Ruslan Abdulgani, tonight called on the President of the United States, Mr Dwight Eisenhower, to make a "more contribution in defending world peace."

He also said that "with respect" to the Government of Indonesia, he called on Mr Eisenhower to "take a firm attitude towards those who seek to interfere with national independence and sovereignty, especially the nations of Asia and Africa."

CONGRATULATIONS

Extending his congratulations to Mr Eisenhower on his re-election, Mr Abdulgani said the Government of Indonesia has always respected the American President for his foreign policy he had shown himself to be a world leader who tried to maintain world peace and to solve problems and international conflicts "by the path of peace and without the use of force."

Mr Abdulgani made this statement to foreign correspondents at a reception at the Russian Embassy to mark the October Revolution standing before the bust of Lenin.—Reuter.

London Gets Smuts Statue

London, Nov. 7.

A striking bronze statue of the late Field Marshal Jan Smuts was unveiled today in Parliament Square, Westminster.

Mr W. S. Morrison, Speaker of the House of Commons, unveiled the memorial to the famous South African leader.

The Union Jack and the flag of the Union of South Africa fell away to reveal the statue by Sir Jacob Epstein. Sir Winston Churchill was to have unveiled the immortal, but was unable to perform the ceremony because of his recent chill. Sir Anthony Eden was unable to attend, but both Lady Churchill and Lady Eden were present.

FIREMEN INJURED

New York, Nov. 7.

Five firemen were injured today when an early-morning grease duct fire in a kitchen of the Miyako Restaurant, New York's most famous Japanese eating place.

Owner Kazuei Tsukada, asleep in living quarters on the top floor, was aroused by the smell of smoke and awakened four sleeping employees. All escaped without injury.

The firemen were burned on the hands and faces when flames from the duct, which runs from the ground floor through the roof, broke through the floor of the third story.

Most of the damage was from smoke and water, but the restaurant was expected to be closed several days for repairs.—United Press.

Ike Returns To Battle With World Unrest

By PAUL SCOTT RANKINE

New York, Nov. 7.

Morally and politically strengthened by an overwhelming election victory, President Eisenhower today buckled down to the task of averting what one New York newspaper described as "The most ominous threat to peace since the end of World War Two."

The breakdown of the uneasy peace in the Middle East and Eastern Europe reached a defining climax in the last stages of the election campaign. Never since President Roosevelt was re-elected in 1944, some six months before the summit conference with Britain and the Soviet Union at Yalta have so many crucial problems crowded in on a newly elected president.

The essence of these proposals for top level meetings is presumably to bring around once again national leaders who can make quick and authoritative decisions on the spot. But President Eisenhower is now confronted by the peculiar problem that Mr Dulles, who has frequently been accused of playing his cards too close to the chest and of not sharing his foreign policy thinking with his colleagues, will be confined to hospital for several weeks.

Replacement?

This problem has given rise to some speculation as to whether the President might not decide that the time is coming for him to replace the 68-year-old Mr Dulles with a younger and less controversial figure.

The second was how to rebuild the Western Alliance, shaken to its foundation by independent British and French intervention last week in efforts to divide Egypt and Israel belligerents in the Suez Canal area.

The third was how, without endangering both these objectives, to bring into existence and into position a United Nations police force to prevent the nuclear cease fire in the Middle East from deteriorating into new and possibly expanded hostilities with the participation of either Soviet "volunteers" or actual Soviet forces.

A number of proposals were before the president for high level meetings to resolve the crisis.

The Swiss Government have proposed a meeting "at the summit" to deal with the global crisis. Britain and France have proposed a meeting of the foreign ministers of the members of the United Nations Security Council in an effort to reach a permanent settlement of Middle Eastern problems.

Fatal Step?

Would such meetings enable the great powers in their search for peace to cut through the cumbersome procedure of the

Critical Years Ahead For Malaya

Kuala Lumpur, Nov. 7.

THE next ten years would be a critical one for Malaya, the High Commissioner, Sir Donald McGillivray, told the Federal Legislative Council today.

He spoke at the opening of the budget session at which estimates of expenditure for 1957 totalling RM77,520,700 were presented.

He said among the countries of Asia the preparation of Malaya had advanced in many fields.

"It is unthinkable that she should stand still, still less go back, but to go forward will call for high endeavour, faith in the future and readiness to meet some sacrifices."

He predicted a prosperous future for Malaya's two main industries, rubber and tin.

He said both the Government and the people must work together

AIDE-MÉMOIRE ON CEASEFIRE

United Nations, Nov. 7.

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld today released the following aide-mémoire he sent to the Governments of France, Britain, Israel and Egypt on Monday to clarify the ceasefire developments to that time:

★ 1. In replies received to the request for a ceasefire effective on November 4, 1956, 2400 GMT, the Governments of France and the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that as soon as the Governments of Israel and Egypt signify acceptance of, and the United Nations endorsed a plan for, an international force with the functions prescribed, the two governments would cease all military action.

★ 2. By adoption of the resolution on November 5, 1956, providing for the establishment of a United Nations Command, the United Nations General Assembly has taken the first decisive step in implementation of its previous acceptance in principle of a United Nations force to secure cessation of hostilities under all the terms established in its resolution on the subject of November 2, 1956.

★ 3. The Government of Egypt has, through a message to the Secretary-General of 5 November 1956, accepted the resolution of the General Assembly of 5 November 1956, and may thus be considered as having accepted the establishment of an international force under the terms fixed by the United Nations. No similar declaration is yet available from the Government of Israel.

★ 4. The Government of Egypt has, on November 4, 1956, accepted the request of the Secretary-General for a ceasefire, without any stipulated conditions. It is to be assumed that this acceptance, although referring to the time-limit set in the request of the Secretary-General, is generally valid.

★ 5. The Government of Israel has now in a clarified position in its first reply to the request of the Secretary-General for a ceasefire, stated that in the light of Egypt's declarations of willingness to a ceasefire Israel consents to its readiness to agree to a ceasefire.

★ 6. The condition for a general ceasefire would, thus, seem to be established, and a new request arranged, provided that the Governments of France and the United Kingdom would recognise the decision of the General Assembly, establishing a United Nations Command, as meeting the condition they have made for a cessation of hostilities, and if, further, the Government of Israel were to endorse the same General Assembly decision.

The essence of these proposals for top level meetings is presumably to bring around once again national leaders who can make quick and authoritative decisions on the spot. But President Eisenhower is now confronted by the peculiar problem that Mr Dulles, who has frequently been accused of playing his cards too close to the chest and of not sharing his foreign policy thinking with his colleagues, will be confined to hospital for several weeks.

He arrives from Ottawa, where he conferred with the Canadian Government on the International crises.

Mr Casey will spend two days of intensive talks at the State Department with a view to renewing Western solidarity and preparing for the ANZUS meeting to be held here on Friday next week.

He also plans to give a press conference to explain Australia's role in Anglo-American relations.

Mr Casey will begin his visits to the State Department tomorrow by conferring with the acting Secretary of State, Mr Herbert Hoover Jr., and then will confer with other officials.

He will wind up his visit by conferring with the Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs, Mr William Rountree, on the entire Near Eastern situation.—United Press.

THIE discontented dandies who want to fill the world with mechanical gadgetry of an accuracy strict enough to make them foam at the mouth with excitement—these martyrs to howling folly will be gravely disappointed by the "atomic clock" to which I have been reading:

"It will be just as continual 'three score years and a century' 'Ho-ho-ho!' Do you call this the 'Atomic Age,' and then tolerate a clock which will lose a minute every 2,000 years? Do you want to be the laughing-stock of posterity with the slovenly inefficient chronometer?"

YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8

BORN today you are endowed with tremendous latent mental power. If you can realize the fullest use of these in their fullness you will bring you the greatest possible benefit. You have a highly analytical mind—one which accepts nothing without proof. You want tested facts for proof. You have that very rare combination of intuition and the scientific method of approach which is very difficult to learn unless you are rolling. The only trouble is that sometimes you spend so much time analysing and getting at basic facts that the time action has passed before you have made your decision.

Persons and opportunities must be approached with an open mind, on some aspects of life you can condone and accept; on others you can condemn and repudiate. You love beauty in all its forms and will go without rather than to sacrifice it. You are inclined to think that your way is the one and only way. You are methodical in your own operations and expect them to be done in the most efficient manner.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Confusion can be calmed by level-headed co-operative action. Think before you act and all will be well.

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 19)—Avoid letting friends confuse important issues. Decide things for yourself. A change may be unexpected but advantageous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—There may be minor tensions this morning, but if you take definite action calmly, all is well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20)—Don't let your pride and hubris carefully, and find out where you stand; then act accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 18)—Be tactful and diplomatic in all personal contacts today, for an impulsive step could be in the wrong direction!

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 21)—Lie low and don't act after lunch-till before jumping into action. Then keep a low profile.

ARIES (Mar. 22-Apr. 19)—There can be tensions today which tend to confuse issues. Keep a low profile.

Part of the story, probably, is that the hand took place at about two o'clock in the morning during the grueling round-robin contest that decides the Master Team Championship each year. This is the hour at which weird bids and poor plays are born.

West opened the deuce of spades, expecting dummy to show up with length in both spades and hearts. He thought his partner might have a singleton spade and that the opening spade lead would pave the way for a ruff.

Declarer hopefully bypassed dummy's lack of spades, since it would provide three club discards if this card held. East covered with the queen of spades and South ruffed.

South next led a low heart, and West took his ace.

It was now up to West to guess which ace his partner held. The longer West considered the matter, the more it seemed him that South was ready for a club lead but might have been "lying" about his diamond bid. West therefore led a diamond, and the party was over.

South managed to discard both of dummy's clubs on the ace of diamonds and his last established diamond, making his slam contract. If West had led a club, the contract would have been defeated.

The Butterfly was quite beautiful. Her wings were yellow and gold. They looked painted. She fluttered up and down to get the witness off.

"I've been flying around ever since daybreak," she said, "trying to find some breakfast. I don't suppose you've any honey in this house that I might borrow?"

"Knarf had strawberry jam for a bit—or do you?"

"Not at all," said Hand.

Just then a butterfly fluttered through the open window.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," she said, when she noticed Knarf and Hand. "I hope you don't mind my coming in out of the rain for a bit—or do you?"

"It's hard to say," said the Butterfly.

"You'd better try all of them," said Knarf.

"I'm afraid," said the Butterfly, "that I won't be able to eat all of them. But this is what I suggest. Each of you try a bit of the different kinds and I'll try the one you each like best."

Knarf liked strawberry jam the best.

Hand liked black currant jam the best.

The Butterfly tried a drop of strawberry and a drop of black currant.

"I like them both the best," she said.

Then she fluttered back into the other room.

Lots Of Jam

The Butterfly fluttered with them into the kitchen.

There was every kind of jam: strawberry, gooseberry, black currant, raspberry, blackberry, cherry, and plum-and-apple jam.

"Which would you like, dear?" asked Hand.

"It's hard to say," said the Butterfly.

"You'd better try all of them," said Knarf.

"I'm not so sure of that," said the Butterfly.

"I'm afraid," said the Butterfly, "that I won't be able to eat all of them. But this is what I suggest. Each of you try a bit of the different kinds and I'll try the one you each like best."

Knarf liked strawberry jam the best.

Hand liked black currant jam the best.

The Butterfly went on, "we butterflies stay under a leaf for protection when it rains."

Two dresses from the Fredrica collection:

Right: A shirt dress in black and white woven gingham has a lampshade pleated skirt permanented to wash and drip dry.

SPRING DRESSES WILL LOOK SMART IN NEW LENGTH

By Hazel Meyrick

London

THIE new season's cottons will hit a low level—6 inches from the ground—if designer Frederick Starke has his way.

At the London showing, of his collection recently, he produced dresses with skirts that brushed the model's ankles, or hovered an inch or so above, played for safety by partnering each with a similar, shorter-length style.

FOR ROCK AND ROLL

Despite new fancies, new finishes, new leads from Paris, the cotton dress designers can't produce anything more exciting than our old friend the shirt-waister.

Frederick Starke's version of this fashion basic was made up in a gold-dusted Indian print cut in a sash-style and ankle-length.

The dress for rock 'n' rollers, obviously, was a black cotton dance frock with no less than three sets of shoulder-straps as a precaution against over-energetic dancing.

The coolest dress in the collection was cut from chalk-white cotton faille with a low, squared neckline, full skirt, long sleeves, proving once again that it is the covered-up look that counts in a heatwave.

A WARNING

Dresses for town were sleek, dark in solid colours, made up in cotton faille, or twill with small all-over patterns. A word of warning about the slick cotton sheath: Unless you are the dressmaker's dream—the girl who is stock-sized—you must expect, when buying off the peg, to alter the odd dart here and there if you want a couture fit.

Don't be talked into buying a dress that's too tight. The skirt will wrinkle and look like a rag the moment you sit down. Swallow pride, and ask for the next size up, nip it in neatly at the waist yourself.

Why did the Fredrica collection have such sad, sober colourings—all gradations of mud from olive green to khaki. The play clothes were brighter. There were separates made from vivid sail-cloth, shirts over shorts and strapless tops, and beach pyjamas in gay stripes.

One topper had a letter-box pocket placed squarely over the stomach, was worn with something new in casual wear—putty-coloured, tapering slacks in cotton faille.

NEW FACE LIFT

The working girl's fur coat, beaver lamb, was given a face-lift when the largest fur chain stores—they operate all over the world—showed just what can be done with it when it is put in the hands of top-ranking fashion designers.

Simone of Rome dyed it blue, made it into a cropped after-ski jacket with black lapels. Fontana chose blue-green beaver lamb for a luxury coat with a scalloped hem.

Sybille Connolly, Ireland's fashion genius, made it look so like black Alaska seal you wouldn't know the difference. Madeline de Rauch added a knitted collar and cuffs.

My vote goes to Jacques Griffe of Paris. He produced a shiny black coat in honey-brown beaver lamb that looked as though it must cost a great deal, with a glimmering gold button, tapacious patch pockets.

A beaver lamb coat need cost you no more than a good tweed one, so it's a practical possibility for most of us, and a far more attractive one, now that the designers have started it up.

LAST NIGHT'S RUGGER

CIVILIANS VERSUS ARMY WAS THE BEST MATCH SO FAR THIS SEASON

Says "PAK LO"

Last night's Civilians versus Army match will go down in the annals of local rugby history and will form a talking point among fans for a long time to come. It started raggedly and slowly but gradually became more and more tense and exciting as time progressed, until in the closing minutes there was hardly a throat in the crowd which was not strained.

The final score of a draw was the perfect answer to this thrilling match, and since each fifteen scored a penalty goal, they can each therefore boast that their line was never crossed.

In the closing minutes of Cordova converted an easy penalty for the Army side to give them their slender lead and with the seconds tickling away the Civilians swept down on what was then their last chance of a score.

On the Army 25 they were awarded a penalty right out on the wing, and as O'Kelly stepped slowly back for his usual angled kick the crowd held its breath.

O'Kelly swept in and round and his boot connected with a solid thud and the ball went straight at a line between the posts to the vociferous acclamation of the crowd. So the score was tied.

Never have I heard so many people after a match assure their nearest neighbour that they had enjoyed a game so much, and this idea of HIRU's has in its first tria, worked out so well, that the next match should see an even bigger crowd than was there last night.

The game was well referred throughout by Mr Carter and the few odd points he missed were caused by his being clearly sighted by the forwards.

NEVER LET UP

Both packs of forwards gave of their best and never let up. If anything the Civilians were slightly better in the loose and they made more of the line-outs, for with the Army continually passing the ball back the Civilians were breaking through almost as they pleased to harass Turnbull, who despite all their attentions had an excellent game.

His passing was perfect and he used, or tried to use his three to good effect. The Army three looked better, but they made little ground in their running with one outstanding exception, and that was Worthy, who was very wary hard to stop.

The other threes passed weakly at times, but they were to a large extent upset by the hard tackling of the Civilians particularly Roberts who stopped everything coming his way.

The Army pack snared the scrum in the first half but in the second half the ball never once came back to the Civilians. Cunningham, and then the immediate replacement to McLean who still has concessions, if any, still did his best, but no match for Barker, who was in the loose as well.

The Civilian threes were hardly at all over the field, generally lying too far up ready to attack their opponents when they got the ball, and when the Civilians' halves did get the ball the three were all out of line than anything else.

STILL A FAINT HOPE OF DUTCH OLYMPIC HOCKEY TEAM COMING HERE

Though the Netherlands has withdrawn from the Olympic Games at Melbourne, there is still a faint hope that the Netherlands Olympic Hockey team may tour the Far East and visit Hongkong.

No definite word had been received by the Hongkong Hockey Association up to now today as to whether the projected visit to Hongkong has been cancelled.

However, France-Presse reports from Macao that the Macao Hockey Club has been invited by the Singapore Hockey Association to take part in a quadrangular hockey tournament between Singapore, Pakistan, the Netherlands and Macao in Singapore during the second half of December.

France-Presse reports also that the Macao Hockey Club has accepted an invitation from the Hongkong Hockey Association to send its best team to Hongkong to play against the second half of December.

THE LATE TOM WHITTAKER His Memory Will Linger Longest For The Door That Was Ever Open

Says DENNIS HART

The name of Tom Whittaker, manager of Arsenal Football Club, who died last month, will always be remembered. So will the work he did. He added fresh glamour to the glory that is Arsenal.

Yet the greatest legacy Tom Whittaker can leave football and the whole world of sport is the memory not of what he did but the way he did it.

He served Arsenal and sport for 37 years as a player, trainer and manager. Such was the healing gift in his hands that he was asked to name his own fee to go into practice in Highbury Street. He turned the offer down to serve the sport and sportsmen he loved.

It is true to say that sport will be the poorer for his passing. Rather let us say we will be the richer for his usual style of play mounted.

In the middle of it all a star player asked for a transfer. He thought that Arsenal's style of play did not suit his own. Whittaker talked things over with the player. He never mentioned the club's difficulties or his own worries. No one could have blamed him for being just a bit annoyed. But when I spoke to him immediately afterwards he just remarked: "He's a good lad, just a bit of a schoolboy at heart."

The player did leave the club. Later he regretted the move. His form suffered. He said he never got the same understanding he got from Tom Whittaker.

Not only Arsenal benefited from Tom Whittaker's advice. It was sought by and available to all. Managers of other clubs often dropped in to Highbury to "have a chat with Tom."

HIGHEST PAID

Tom Whittaker had the plum of soccer posts. He was the highest paid, he enjoyed the full support of an influential board of directors. When he retired he would certainly have been elected to the board.

His security was absolute. Yet it was Tom Whittaker who devoted a great amount of time to forming the Football Secretaries and Managers' Association. He became its chairman and pioneered the pension scheme.

OLYMPIC GAMES

Japan Expects Five Or Six Gold And Several Silver And Bronze Medals

Tokyo, Nov. 7.

The Japan Olympic Committee foresees five or six gold medals and several silver and bronze medals for the Japanese delegation in the forthcoming Melbourne games.

Japan is sending a delegation of 118 athletes, including 16 women, 29 officials and 14 observers, doctors, international officials plus a delegate to the International Olympic Committee.

With the formation of the delegation completed, preparations for the games have now entered the final phase. The 11 teams comprising the delegation, have been undergoing intensive camp training.

The largest team is the swimming team of 18 men, 7 women and 5 officials. Its camp training in Kyushu, where the climate is mild and warm for November, consisted of a carefully planned diet, daily exercise, recreation and planning. This team is the core of the Japanese delegation and with the track and field teams Japan expects them to win at least two gold medals and half a dozen silver and bronze medals.

Although American and Australian swimmers, their toughest rivals, during the past two months, have more or less eclipsed their presence, the Japanese swimmers are far from discouraged. In fact, this has served as an incentive to their athletic spirit.

SURE TO WIN

Sure to win a gold medal is 20-year-old Masaru Furukawa, a world record holder in the 200 metres breast-stroke. Furukawa has displayed a full vigour of health and stamina during camp training and often bettered his own world record of 2 minutes, 33.2 seconds in a 25-metre pool.

The swimming team's second biggest hope is young Ishimoto with his best record for the 200 metres butterfly stroke standing at 2 minutes, 20.5 seconds. America's Bill Yorick clipped six tenths of a second off this record but Ishimoto is expected by virtue of his youth and stamina, to emulate his American rival fairly well.

The wrestling team's second biggest hope is young Ishimoto with his best record for the 200 metres butterfly stroke standing at 2 minutes, 20.5 seconds. America's Bill Yorick clipped six tenths of a second off this record but Ishimoto is expected by virtue of his youth and stamina, to emulate his American rival fairly well.

With the Japanese swimming, gymnastics, wrestling and athletic teams on an international level, its rowing, soccer and basketball teams are well below this level.

Massaharu Tabata, head of the Japanese delegation, told Agence France-Presse in an interview: "In the Helsinki Games, we were too much handicapped by the vacuum created by the war. However, this year, the Japanese athletes will put up a fine competition and I will bet they will win five or six gold medals. Their 'athletic recovery' has been as tremendous as the post-war economic recovery of Japan".

Other Japanese teams competing are: Wrestling, 8 competitors and 2 officials, Gymnastics 6 men and 6 women competing and 3 officials — rowing 10 men and one official — football 17 men and 2 officials — basketball 11 men and 2 officials — weightlifting 5 men and one official — shooting 6 men and 2 officials — boxing 3 men and one official — and cycling — one man and one official — France-Press.

SELF CONFIDENCE

P.

Kogake admitted that although he was astounded by his own record, he was steadily gaining self confidence and hoped to do better at Melbourne.

H.

His team officials expect the stiffest opposition to come from A. F. Da Silva, Brazil's world record holder with 16.50 metres, and the Soviet Union's former world record holder, L. Scherbakov.

A.

Another gold medal hope is 25-year-old Takeshi Ono, who won a bronze medal in the 1952 Helsinki Olympic games.

Meanwhile, the Hongkong

Hockey Association, pending receipt of a reply to a cable sent to the Netherlands Hockey Association, is continuing to plan for a possible series with the Netherlands Olympic Hockey team in Hongkong between December 12 and 15 and Saturday's trial match will take place as arranged.

Hockey Association, pending receipt of a reply to a cable sent to the Netherlands Hockey Association, is continuing to plan for a possible series with the Netherlands Olympic Hockey team in Hongkong between December 12 and 15 and Saturday's trial match will take place as arranged.

Japan—Best Equipped Team At Melbourne

Melbourne, Nov. 7.—Of the 27 national teams, totalling 831 competitors and officials which have already arrived in the Olympic Games Village, the Japanese have won the title of being the best equipped.

They have their own cars, their own motor scooters and their food.

They are said to pin much hope on their distance swimmer Yamanaka and their wrestlers. Their wrestling leader Ichiro Hatta said their sport of Judo had enabled them to develop several secret holds which should help them to win medals in the free style events, in which the world featherweight champion Sashihara was competing—China Mail Special.

ANOTHER CONTINGENT

Melbourne, Nov. 7.—The Russian merchant ship Gruza, carrying another contingent of Olympic athletes from the Soviet Union and Hungary, finally arrived in Melbourne early tonight—almost a week behind schedule.

The 16,000-ton ship originally was due here last Thursday but "disappeared" for several days off the west coast of Australia.

None of the passengers were permitted to embark until two Soviet Olympic representatives appeared on the wharf. They were greeted by short bursts of applause from the Russian athletes who lined the rails.

Among the first ashore were 17 Hungarians, most of whom admitted "we only knew what we were told about the fighting" in Hungary.—United Press.

Hungary Should Be The Danger Side In Next Year's World Soccer Cup Series

Says DON REVIE

While England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales are getting geared up for the World Cup matches next year, everyone seems to have taken their eyes off the bogey men from Budapest. Yes, I do mean the Hungarians.

The majestic Magyars gave England an object lesson in the fine arts of football two years ago, and since then they have slipped a little. Everyone thought Puskas, Kocsis and the rest of the team had got the skids under them and that Hungary's wonder side was just a pleasant memory.

That view was reinforced when Hungary withdrew from the Olympic Games. Most people felt they dropped out of the Games at Melbourne because they thought they had no chance of winning.

I might be wrong, but in my view this was all part of a long-term Hungarian strategy. I believe that they withdrew because they desperately want to win the World Cup and everything is being planned to that end.

Thinking for a moment Hungary won the Olympic title once before. They had set their hearts on winning the World Cup in 1954 in Switzerland. They would have done so, but for an extraordinary chain of events which ended when they lost in the final to Germany.

That defeat was a blow to Hungarian pride. They mean to wipe it out by winning the 1958 World Cup 'ette.'

Why do I feel so sure of this? Well, friends behind the Iron Curtain tell me that the Hungarians have found that old football magic again. They are training and working hard to however not a perfect team blend, like the side which crashed England 6-3 at Wembley in 1953.

In this new style treatment I gather Charles suffered no inconvenience. The foot was frozen but he reported to the physiotherapist that he never gave the slightest trouble throughout the whole 90 minutes.

Looks as if science has stepped in again to help injured footballers, and I should imagine that John Charles will now be inundated with inquiries about the new treatment.

Already Hungary has played Russia, France and Austria, and according to my informant, they have not lost this year. Because of this I was more than interested to see how they played on television recently. All the old stars were there—and from what I saw the Hungarians are playing with the confidence and power they showed us a few years ago.

Now don't think I'm going all pessimistic, and suggesting that England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales have no chance. But it's as well to know where the big danger will come from. And I hereby name Hungary as one of the biggest menaces to our chances when the World Cup games are played.

FROZEN PAIN
Footballers all over the country were interested to hear of the new type of treatment given to John Charles in the Cardiff international to kill the pain in his right ankle.

In the past many footballers have gone on the field to play with a pain killing injection. Bill Leevets, the Manchester City fullback, was treated for the first Cup Final. But at the end of the game, Bill's ankle was swollen almost twice its normal size and he had to have his boot cut off.

Howard said Miss Kelly is a big motivating force in the trend.

"The ideal now really is the Kelly-type," he said. "Both men and women like her ladylike lines. She looks feminine without appearing overpowering. Our firm makes a brassiere called 'Hidden Treasure.' This one is designed for the small figure. When sales boomed in this brassiere model, we knew a trend was under way. The obvious parallel conclusion is that women are getting smaller since more of them are buying this bra."

He's not prepared to say what the next trend might be.

"It all depends on what catapaults to fame next in Hollywood," he said. "Ask the studios who's next—if they know."

Agar said there was one point he wanted to make about "The Mole People."

"This film has no political implications," he said with a smile. "The people live underground—they don't go underground."

Hollywood acts as if babies were brought by the stork, one woman wrote. Another woman charged that it wasn't too sharp an idea to make an exhibition of woman's proudest mission."

These are only two of the sentiments expressed in several hundred letters received by Universal—International after announcement that it would make "The Night Runner," a film in which Merry Anders plays the part of a woman five months pregnant.

Most of the letters came from women. At the last tabulation, those favouring a film showing a pregnant woman were somewhat ahead.

"Expectant mothers are seen on the streets every day," the first mother wrote. "And yet Hollywood acts as if babies were really brought by the stork. We never see a pregnant woman on the screen. I'm glad you're reversing this trend."

This woman was in the group which indicated it preferred "realism." But there were plenty who thought the idea not too good.

"This would violate the screen," a mother wrote. "It would make an exhibition of woman's proudest mission. Pregnancy should remain sacred and never be shown on motion pictures."

THE ACTRESS' VIEW

And there was pretty Miss Anders, mother of one child, right smack in the middle. She thought about the whole thing for a while, and then she made her own stand.

"Well, once I worked in a TV show when I was actually pregnant," she said. "And six weeks after I had my baby I took Jayne Mansfield's role in a local production of 'Will Success Spell Rock-Hunter?'

"As far as I'm concerned it's no subject for controversy. I don't think I'm violating any moral law. I don't feel heroic because I'm playing a pregnant woman. It's just that this is a good part. I'm an actress, and that's that."

Now Miss Anders faces only one problem in connection with the film. Her wardrobe designers say that Miss Anders' shape isn't the kind that adapts itself readily to a makebelieve pregnancy.

"No matter what we do to her, she still has too much shape for an expectant mother," said designer Rosemary Odell.

John Agar originally wanted to be a professional golfer. Then he became interested in motion pictures and is now under a long-term contract at Universal-International, but his film work is now leading him to another field of interest—science.

AROUND HOLLYWOOD

WE MAY BE IN FOR A WAVE OF KELLY-LIKE GRACEFUL FIGURES

By RON BURTON

Things are going to be on the lean side as far as the female shape is concerned whether or not the boys like it.

Most of this change in the American bustline will be due to Hollywood as the pacesetter and Grace Kelly as an object of envy because of her trim figure.

In fact, people like Anita Ekberg, Jane Russell and Marilyn Monroe really are not very representative of typical American beauties. The new style is symbolized by Grace Kelly, who has yet to be called buxom.

All this comes from a fellow named Bill Howard, who is a brassiere manufacturer. In his position he notes what sales trends are taking place in what lines of garments and what sizes. His first impression is that we may be in for a wave of Kelly-like figures.

"We learned that the American woman is becoming more flat-chested, if you really want the blunt truth," Howard said.

SALES TREND

"We also feel that the American male may not like—contrary to general opinion—in the overblown types previously in vogue. Of course, we admit there is speculation on this point but we're sure about the first item."

Howard said Miss Kelly is a big motivating force in the trend.

"The ideal now really is the Kelly-type," he said. "Both men and women like her ladylike lines. She looks feminine without appearing overpowering. Our firm makes a brassiere called 'Hidden Treasure.' This one is designed for the small figure. When sales boomed in this brassiere model, we knew a trend was under way. # NEW OCEAN DEPTHS

Scientists Report

On Telemachus

Survey Expedition

Sydney, Nov. 7. Discoveries of new ocean depths and new underwater mountains, valleys and plateaux are being reported by two civilian research scientists who sailed in the Royal Navy's submarine Telemachus on an international geophysical year survey.

The scientists are Mr. S. Gunson, a geophysicist with the Australian Bureau of Mineral Resources, and Mr. H. Trapnell, of the Lamont Geological Observatory, New York. Captain G. D. Tancer, head of the Royal Australian navy Hydrographic Section was also with the expedition.

Telemachus covered 12,000 miles and made 138 dives in the Tasman Sea in the Pacific off New Zealand and near the Kermadec Islands, Fiji and New Caledonia.

During their dives, the scientists plumbed a new depth in the Tongan Trench, which is about six miles deep; found an underwater mountain of New Caledonia extending toward New Zealand and explored the Blue Mountains behind Sydney, with valleys crisscrossing in spectacular fashion.

Another mountain range has been discovered between 200 and 300 miles east of Wollongong, with many peaks rising 6,000 feet from the ocean bed. This is believed to run at least 800 miles north and south. The survey ended at the 40th parallel, where the range was still unbroken.

While Mr. Gunson and Mr. Trapnell were working on new instruments in their 12 feet by 5 feet ammunition magazine, submarine personnel were making observations for the Admiralty.

During the cruise, Telemachus was taken to 240 feet for about an hour at a time. Here at depths unaffected by wind, waves, or currents, Mr. Gunson and Mr. Trapnell made their observations at 50-mile intervals from a calm, stable platform—the submarine itself.

A mass of lead, for example, would affect the swing of the pendulum. Timing the swing would give the two scientists the information they sought—since lead exerts a greater gravitational force than other substances.

The Royal Australian Navy's Hydrographic Section has carried out many marine surveys with the object of making Australia's eastern coast safe for shipping. Captain Tancer described this coast as at present "the front."

He said the survey ship HMS Barcoo, which has done a great deal of work in charting the coastal shipping lanes, has recently discovered a 15,000 foot plateau rising from the seabed 200 miles off Newcastle.

It has also reported:

A mountain 11,000 feet high—much higher than Australia's highest, Mount Kosciusko (7,320 feet)—30 miles to the north of the plateau;

Another plateau, 13,000 feet high, between the mountain and Lord Howe Island, 430 miles north east of Sydney;

An underwater mountain range 200 miles south-southwest

KNOW LITTLE

"We know little about the routes along our coast, and in the seas about us," he added. "There is enough work to keep three ships and three tenders busy for 25 years."

ANGLO-FRENCH DIFFERENCES ON SUEZ NOW

Paris, Nov. 7.

Franco-British understanding which has been exceptionally close over the last six months was today in some danger of being strained because of differing views on the Suez ceasefire.

Sources close to the French Government said there were two main reasons for this:

First, the attitudes of the two Governments on Israel's refusal to withdraw behind the 1949 armistice lines are entirely different.

Second, the manner in which, according to the sources, the British Government itself helped to force a ceasefire in Suez before the official objectives in the Canal area had been achieved.

SUPPORT ISRAEL

An official close to the Foreign Minister, M. Christian Fouchet, said today that the French Government was 100 per cent behind the Israeli Premier, Mr. David Ben Gurion, in his refusal to abandon Sinai until a definite peace is agreed to by Egypt and in his declaration that the Israel-Egypt armistice has ceased to exist.

The differences between the London and Paris Governments were clearly and officially shown in the difference in the wording of yesterday's British and French notes to the United Nations agreeing to a ceasefire.

The French note deliberately refrained from making any reference to clause two of the United Nations resolution which called for the withdrawal of both Egyptian and Israeli forces behind the 1949 armistice line. It seemed to have been lost sight of.

M. Robert Lacoste, residing minister in Algeria was reported in the lobby as being "very pessimistic" about the impact of the handling of the Suez situation on the future of Algeria.—Reuter.

MONKS MAKE PERFUME

London, Nov. 7.

Cistercian monks have succeeded in producing a high quality perfume which they call "Candy Bouquet" after the island they own and inhabit in seclusion off the Pembrokeshire coast of South Wales.

The Irish-born Prior of Glastonbury, the Very Reverend Eugene Boylan, said that the monks had turned to the production of perfume because of the difficulty of making farming pay.

They had displayed their perfume, he said, at the Bath Show this year, and it had received high praise. The perfume is now on sale at Cardiff, but it is hoped to introduce it to the Irish market soon.

The perfume is being produced on the island under the direction of a Polish chemist, who is a member of the community. About half an acre of lavender and verbena has been grown this year, and the area will progressively increase.

Old Town Tie For Torquay

Torquay, a popular Devonshire holiday resort, is to have its own tie. A scheme has been approved by the Town Council and the design and marketing is being undertaken by the local Chamber of Commerce.

The colour and pattern of the tie has still to be decided, but it will probably employ a small replica of the town's coat of arms. A possible design combination is due for the next gold for sunburst, and other shades for represent Torquay's tropical vegetation.

A corporation official said: "We had requests from tourists for souvenirs of the town which they could wear. Tie-concern Americans have been interested in the idea."

"We feel that not many tourists would buy a tie, but we thought there would be a market for

TRADE and COMMERCE SECTION

Shortage Of Rubber
Expected

Washington, Nov. 7.—The Commerce Department forecast today that temporary shortage of natural rubber may develop in December.

The reason it said, is that shipments from the Far East to the United States are being diverted through the Panama Canal.

The report said, Europe is more affected by the rerouting away from the now-closed Suez Canal and around Africa than is the United States. European manufacturers, it said, may "buy and use increased quantities to American synthetic rubber in November and December." US stocks of synthetic were described as "well above normal and production is capable of considerable increase."—United Press.

Wall Street Reaction To Ike

PROFIT-TAKING FOLLOWS
INITIAL SPURT

New York, Nov. 7.—Wall Street response to President Eisenhower's smashing victory was an initial sharp spurt on late tickers followed by profit-taking on greatly reduced volume.

Initially, prices ran up 2 and 3 points on the heaviest first hour trading since February 15 with stocks appearing in blocks ranging to 10,000 shares.

The million-share total for the hour put tickers as much as four minutes behind floor transactions and kept them running late for 30 minutes.

From the second hour on, however, prices backed down steadily but slowly as operators turned to realizing some of the gains which had piled up in anticipation of the election results. A three-day price rise tally had added some $1 billion to all market values.

Market commentator said the market was performing true to form in settling since the election results had been largely discounted. They attributed the initial spurt to the wide margin of the President's victory.

Industrials Cut

The realising, while sufficiently heavy to cut industrials 4.22 per average and rails 1.54, did not reflect any pressure against the list as evidenced by volume.

Despite the heavy first hour turnover for the day totalled only 2,650,000 shares, compared with 2,630,000 on Monday.

Harshest hit of the leading groups were International oils which reflected news that it will take possibly three months to repair the Suez Canal damage. Gulf fell more than 2, Royal Dutch nearly 2, Standard of California 2 points, Texas Co. 0 point.

Aircrafts and metals held the best. In aircrafts, German rose nearly a point, Douglas and Glenn Martin more than 1 each.

Steel shares, early upside leaders, had losses of over a point in Bethlehem and Inland. US Steel held a small rise.

Chrysler, selling ex-dividend, lost 1%, General Motors 9%. Ford held steady.

Of a total 1,171 issues appearing, 552 were lower, 380 higher.

New York Stock Exchange bond volume was $4,280,000.

American Stock Exchange volume was 860,000 shares.

Dow-Jones closing averages were:

|                         |        |
|-------------------------|--------|
| 20 industrials          | 451.15 |

MARKETS

New York, Nov. 7.—The No. 1 Rs rubber future contract today closed 30 points lower with sales of 17 contracts.

The hex contract closed 10 points lower to 15 points higher with sales of 320 contracts.

Standard contract closed 10 points lower to 15 points higher with no sales reported.

Terminal market operations lacked a special feature.

Dealers and other trade interests operated cautiously either way pending new incentives. Uncertainties in the Middle East situation were restraining traders.

Other traders awaited a scheduled meeting in Washington tomorrow on previously reported proposals to lengthen the time for replacement of rubber secured under the rotation plan from the stockpile.

Factory buyers are expected to press for a longer period, but dealers are expected to take the opposite side.

Meanwhile, factory buying in the delivered market remained slow. Some market technicians thought manufacturers were "short" and waiting for a buying opportunity.

Shipment offerings were moderate to good, particularly on remill trades, brokers said. Spot 1 lb. held at 34 cents a pound.

SINGAPORE

The market was steady today. There was some good trade support but factory interest was small.
